Antonello Giunta, born in Messina on May 14, 1967, holds a degree in Economics and Business Administration, and has specialized through various managerial development courses at the SDA Bocconi School of Management.

Over the years, he has gained significant experience, initially in the telecommunications sector and subsequently in the energy sector. He began his career in 1987 at Telecom Italia, developing progressively increasing skills and managerial roles, first in the Regional Directorate in Palermo as Manager of network management and maintenance, and later in the General Directorate in Rome as Manager of technical-commercial support with the start of the liberalization process of the telecommunications market.

After this career direction, lasting 15 years, he moved to the energy sector, wherein he has held top roles in various companies in the sector for the last 15 years. In 2007, he joined the ACEA group, assuming the role of CEO at Umbria Energy, successfully overseeing its development during the energy market liberalization process. Subsequently, in 2010, he actively participated, after the dissolution of the JV with GDF Suez, in the creation of the newco "Acea Energia", serving as CEO for two terms and consistently keeping the company at the forefront of the reference sector. Since 2018, he has served as CEO, first at Officinae Verdi and then at Verdecò, contributing to fostering the ecological and energy transition processes of some important utilities.

He is a Senior Advisor at D&P with the role of Energy Director.
